the site / traffic-concept

site / traffic

to achieve a townlike ambience in these green fields we need buildings volumes, which fit together and show difference at the same time. the functions must be visible without signs, the forms timeless like grown structures. there are some dominant directions in this site. the lakeshore with its high trees, the connection to the village on the hill (church) and last but not least the small channel. all buildings float around their new center, the marina harbour.

the hotel is dominated by a huge wing, flying over a complex row of white cubes and wide terraces. thus giving the whole structure an elegant and dynamic apperance. especially the appartments under the steel roof get some extra shadow and protected outside space. in the night this element is lit from underneath and visible from far away. the 3 story gap under that roof acts as a welcome sign and shows the entrance to the hotel and the harbour, while seen from the water it connects the marina with the hills (and church) of alsoor, to get the relation to the place.

lockers/showers

this area is highly practical, open, airy and easy to use. storage, toilets and showers for the sailors are hidden behind a wooden grill, bent in a shiplike or saillike form, which is lit by night to form the counterpart to the bar/restaurant pier on the other side.

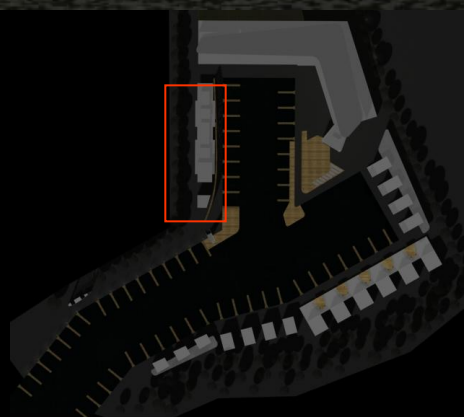

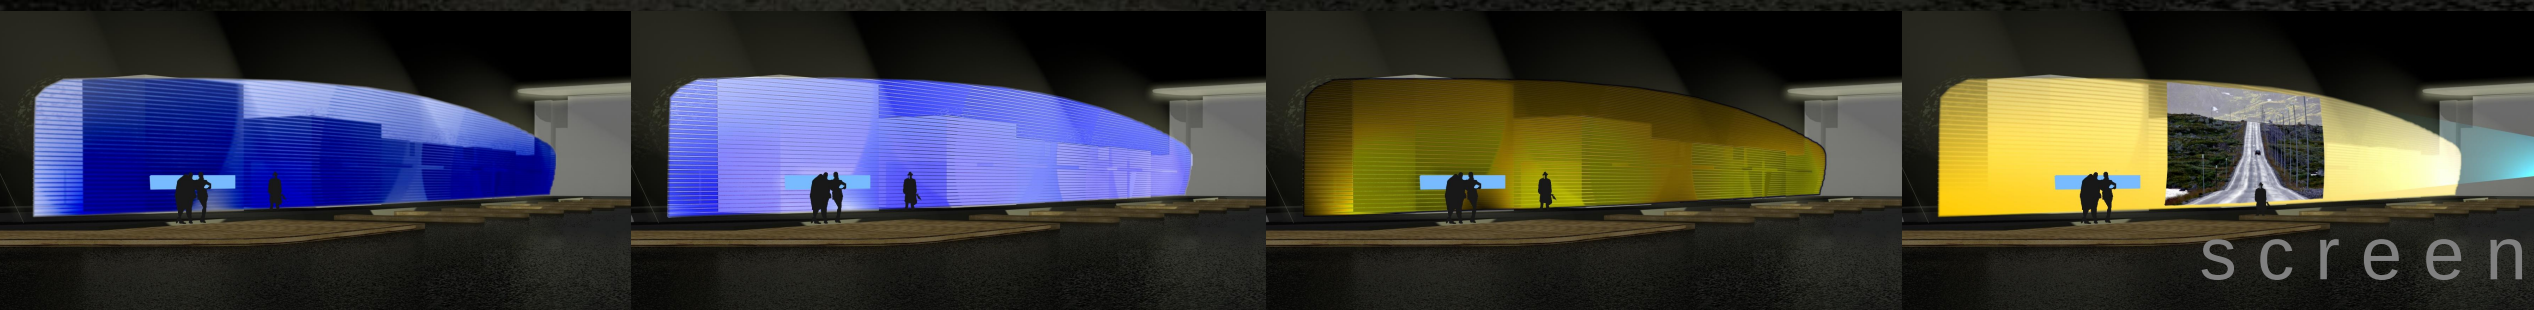

the harbour masters office is integrated in the structure to have perfect view on the basin and incoming sailors.

as this element is directly and dominantly visible from the restaurant/bar/club side, it uses the lamellas as a big screen for a state of the art light system for a one of a kind night spectacle. the marina can also transform into a giant open air cinema.

the park brings the two residential „villages“ together. you can walk along the small channel under trees and rest, or have various sport and leisure elements side by side. natural elements, typical plants of this area form a park, which connects landart and untouched landscape.

the channel is fed by the overflowing water of the pool in the sailing city, and brings the water back to lake balaton.

sailing city is a world with its own style. white houses under huge sails form a piazzastyle courtyard, which is dominated by a pool. its water is directly pumped from lake balaton and therefore like an underground extension. a small existing channel brings the overflowing water back to the lake.

the pond is the center of this small village, children, sunseeker, guests crowd this area, when they are not in their private gardens.

the pier is one of the most important elements of a marina, being the life line, the promenade, the main square of this city. to see and to be seen is essentially the basic things of visitors and boat owners, without that it would be half the fun.

a special light installation gives the linear structure a 3 dimensional extension. slowly waving in the wind, these poles are steel brothers of the weed in the sea, give dynamic and grace.

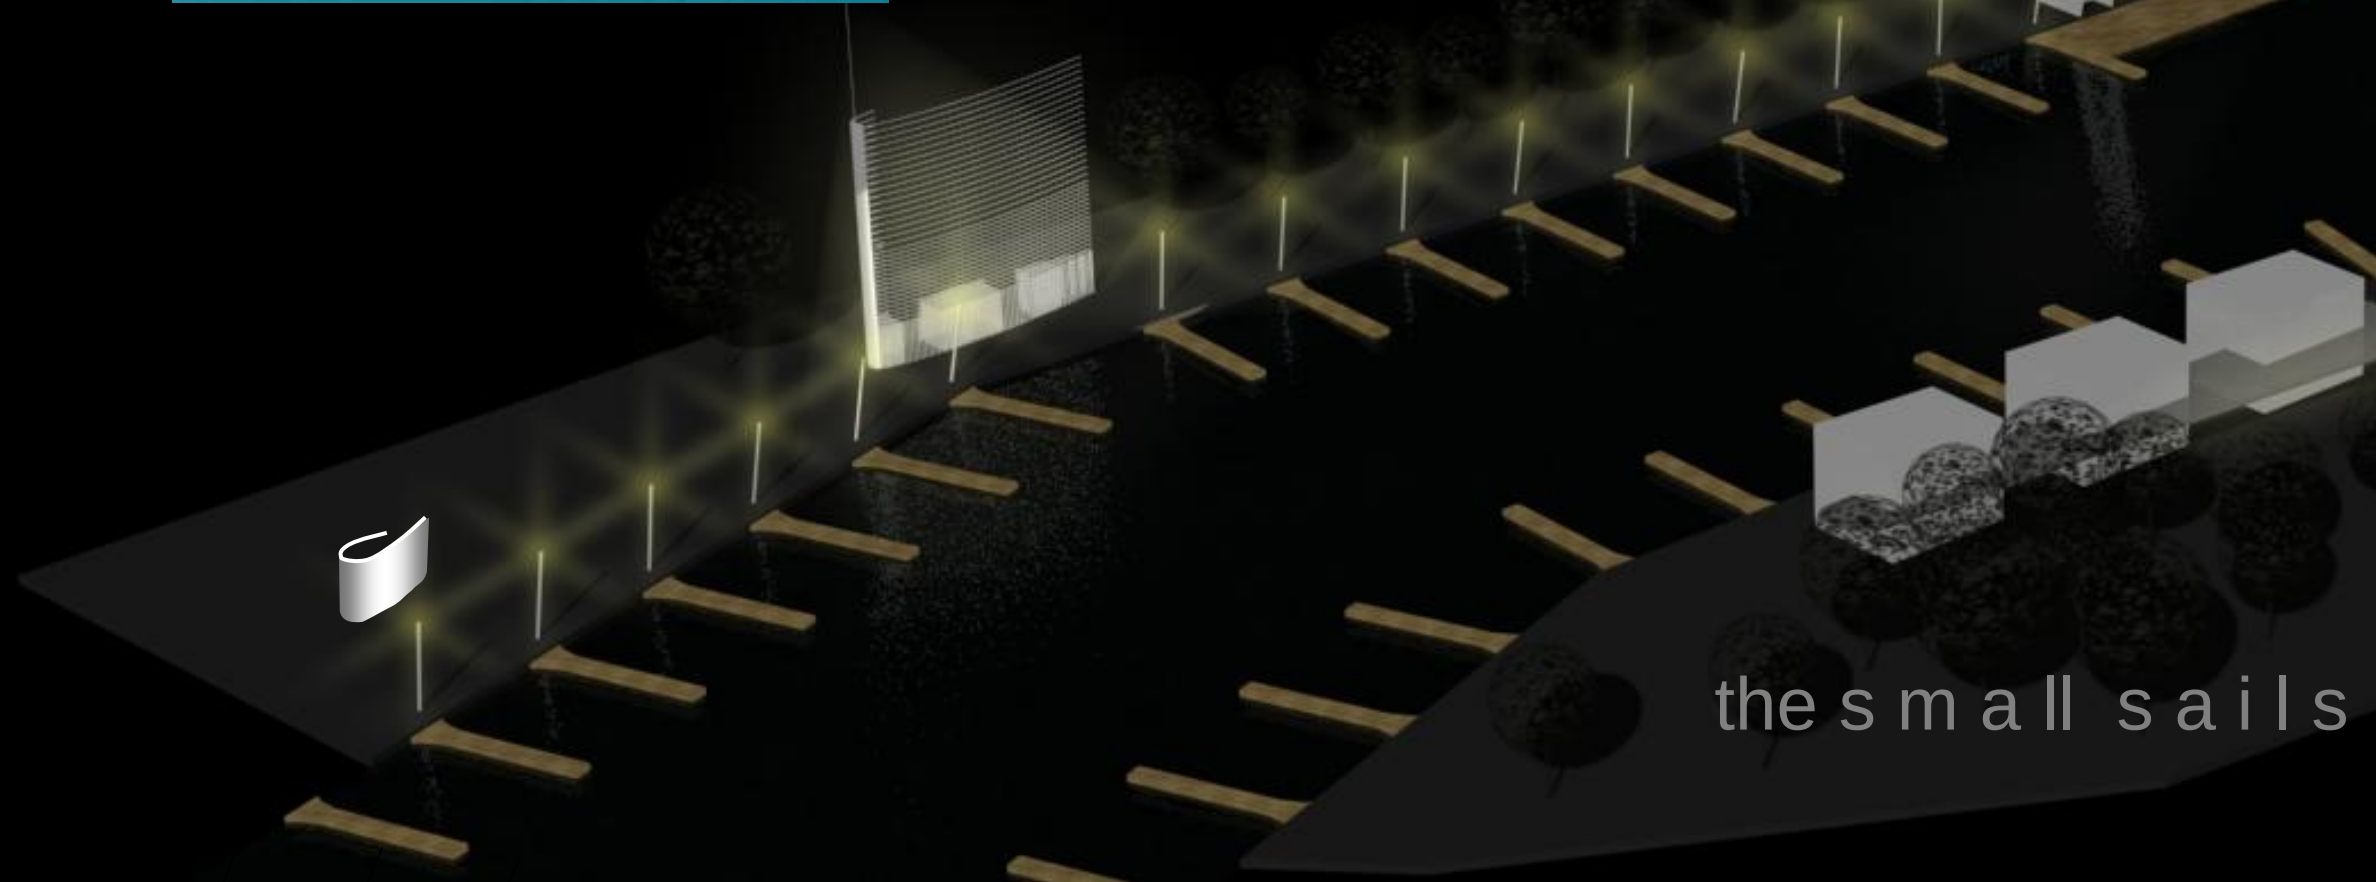

these sail elements can be equipped with shower / transportable toilets / waste. their lightweight structure and printable material give various possibilities with a high visual impact. th structures could be used even in the outer most pier area to give additional comfort for the boats there.

the welcome wing

the welcome wing acts as the first sign of the new structure, following the same principles as the whole complex. white, light, and elegant. it changes its appearance from day to night, supported by a highly developed light system. it holds signs and, last but not least, very welcoming, showers and toilets for the sailors.

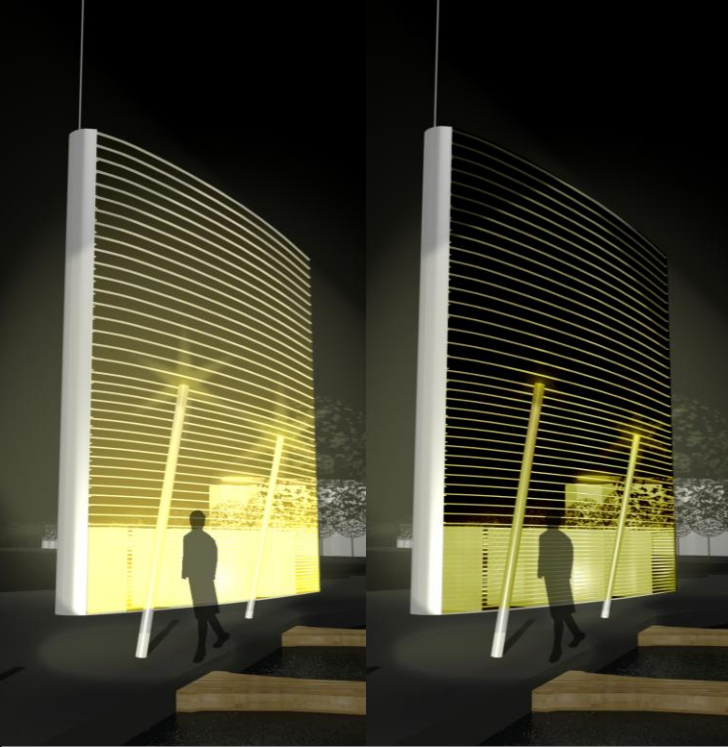

this element features the same lightsystem as the harbour master structure.
